Highland Sanctuary: Environmental History In Tanzania's Usambara Mountains

Christopher A. Conte

"Highland Sanctuary is the 1st old research of the strikingly diverse environmental histories of the East and West Usambaras and an important contribution to worldwide environmental history." Christopher A. Conte explores the altering ecological and financial views of German and British colonial officials, settlers, and scientists, at the one hand, and African farmers and pastoralists, at the other. He unravels the complicated interactions among agriculture, herding, forestry, the colonial state, and the panorama itself. His exam of the region's historical past of ecological transformation exhibits how those forces have mixed to create an ever-changing mosaic of wooded area and field. Conte illuminates the continuing debate over conservation of the mountains' resources, arguing that contingency Highland Sanctuary: Environmental History In Tanzania's Usambara Mountains and alter and human organisation have formed forests in ways in which rival the ability of nature.
