Sally Potter (Contemporary Film Directors)

Catherine Fowler

This survey of Sally Potter's paintings files and explores her cinematic improvement from the feminist remodeling of Puccini's opera I. a. Bohème in mystery to the provocative contemplation of romantic relationships after Sept. 11 in Yes. Catherine Fowler lines a transparent trajectory of constructing topics and preoccupations and exhibits how Potter makes use of song, dance, performance, and poetry to extend our event of cinema past the audiovisual. on the middle of Potter's paintings we discover a priority with the ways that narrative has circumscribed the activities of girls and their skill to act, speak, look, desire, and imagine for themselves. Her first films, mystery and The Gold Diggers, mostly deconstruct came across stories, clichés, and images, whereas her later movies create new and unique narratives that position lady acts, voices, looks, wants and recommendations at their center. Fowler's research is supplemented by means of an in depth filmography, Sally Potter (Contemporary Film Directors) bibliography, and an interview with the director.
