The Stars are Ours (Pax/Astra #1) by Andre Norton

Andre Norton

Earth in 2500AD isn't any position for a tender guy with a dream of freedom. And Dard Nordis is worse off than most. His brother was once killed for covert actions as a unfastened Scientist in The Stars are Ours (Pax/Astra #1) and The Stars are Ours (Pax/Astra #1) international the place technological know-how is outlawed and blamed for all evils. Now Dard and his niece are hunted and searching for his brother's associates sooner than their enemies locate them and execute them as well. The stakes are high-- he may be shot down and killed like his brother or break out to the celebrities in a spaceship that the unfastened Scientists have in-built secret! here's a strong novel of the longer term within which the battle-cry is: the celebrities ARE OURS!

I first learn this while I used to be 8 or 9 years old, and doubtless learn it a few dozen occasions in the course of my childhood. It used to be most likely my favourite book. In general, early Andre Norton (she wrote wonky as she wrote older, and wrote loopy cat woman stuff) is the simplest there's in juvenile technology fiction, besides Heinlein juveniles like Farmer within the Sky. different early Andre Norton favorites have been The Time Traders, The Defiant Agents, The Beast Master, Lord of Thunder, megastar Guard, big name Man's Son, and celebrity Rangers.
